

Our candidates know how important it is for a charity to have a strong financial and technical infrastructure. To help increase charities' efficiency and effectiveness, a high calibre of experienced candidates is required. At TPP, we are experienced in the recruitment of some of the finest charity finance candidates and have excellent relationships with many organisations in the sector.

Candidates who work in finance are able to support and liaise with various departments such as fundraising to ensure that projects run within budget, analyse costs and ensure that any income received is invested and used to allow for the growth and success of the organisation. The way in which an organisation's finances are run, allows for its objectives to be met and for its good work to continue and reach as many people as possible.

"When we had to recruit to a new post of Finance & Resources Manager at very short notice Sophie Butler at TPP couldn't have been more helpful. Even though we first pitched the post to her in the week before Christmas and wanted CVs back at the beginning of the first full week in January she came up with good candidates in the time required. We were able to shortlist and appoint from those initial CVs sent to us. Sophie is very professional in her approach and provided excellent follow up support both to us and the interviews. I would always go to TPP first as we have had brilliant candidates from them in the past and it takes the hassle out of what can be a complex and delicate process."

IT

Information Technology (IT) jobs can vary in the not for profit sector, depending on the size of the organisation and their structure. Typically, IT teams are smaller in charities than in the private sector.

Many organisations tend to outsource their IT services, and some will have 1st and 2nd line support in house and will outsource more complex, 3rd line issues. The main focus for IT jobs is to ensure IT is working effectively and provide support if necessary, and to improve systems, processes and IT infrastructure.

Disciplines we cover

- IT Engineer
- IT Manager
- IT Support
- IT 1st & 2nd line
- Head of IT
- Programmer
- IT Administrator
- Web Developer
- QA Tester
- IT Project Manager
