1

DO YOUR RESEARCH

The biggest interview mistake highlighted by our consultants was not doing any research prior to the interview. When candidates fail to research the company and the role they're applying for, it suggests to the interviewer they are unprepared and somewhat uninterested.

ARRIVE 10 MINUTES EARLY

It's important when you arrive to an interview you're in your best possible mind-set. Make sure you don't arrive flustered. Ensure you know where you're going so you're confident on getting there in a timely manner. Parking is something that often catches people out once they arrive, so make sure you're fully aware of this!

ASK QUESTIONS

An interview is a two way stream. As much as the interviewer is trying to find out if you're a good match for the company, it's equally about discovering if the company is the right fit for you. Prepare your questions. There's going to be things you want to find out about the role, don't be afraid to ask.

GIVE EXAMPLES OF YOUR WORK

If you've got any testimonials from people you've worked with or previous clients, bring them along. References are great, it gives people confidence on the skills you claim. Examples of work you've done previously are also great to show. You have to be prepared to demonstrate your skills and ability.

END WITH A CONFIDENT HANDSHAKE

Last but certainly not least, make sure you have a firm handshake and keep eye contact. Eye contact is important throughout the entire interview, but first impression really do count. The handshake is not an opportunity to assert your dominance – don't try and break the interviewers hand!
