

Set your intentions

There's no harm in being honest. If leaders know that you've got aspirations to move up in the business, they may give you valuable advice on how to go about it.

See projects from start to finish

Ensure that you take ownership of your tasks and see them through completion. This proves yourself as an invaluable member of the organisation.

Raise your team's performance

Once you've got your personal performance down, focus on elevating your team to their full potential. You'll prove that you can be a leader who looks at promotions as a shared win.
